1. Johnston Looks For Way To Heal And Move On

In less than one season, she's had the highest of highs and the lowest of lows. She was picked as a contestant in The Golf Channel's "Big Break VI: Trump National" show. But in the middle of this season, she lost her best friend and fellow Tour member in a fatal automobile accident. Ask third-year player Sarah Lynn Johnston to describe her 2006 season on the Duramed FUTURES Tour and she can answer with one word.

"Chaos," she said. "It's been an emotional roller coaster."

And understandably so for the former Furman University All-American. Johnston, 24, has spent the last three seasons preparing herself to play at the highest level, and from the day she first set foot on the Tour back in 2004 in Lima, Ohio, she had player Gaelle Truet as a sidekick and fellow competitor by her side for every step of the way. Both players made their respective debuts at that event. The following week, they began traveling together from tournament to tournament -- an arrangement that continued for nearly two years in Johnston's former car, "Bernie the Bonneville," a Pontiac with 170,000 miles and more stories than fast-talking Johnston has time to tell.

"They did everything together," said Herbie Sargent, Johnston's boyfriend. "They leaned on each other out here and they figured things out together as young pros. If Sarah Lynn needed a best friend, a best companion and sometimes, even a caddie, Gaelle was that person. She has a very small inner circle of friends and Gaelle was the main person in that inner circle. Now, everything reminds her of Gaelle. It's kind of tough."

Especially in a game that demands focus and concentration. A native of St. Charles, Ill., Johnston worked on some swing changes in the off-season and entered the 2006 season with high hopes. By the second event in Tampa, Fla., she had tied for fifth. Six events later, at one of the Tour's most difficult and demanding tournament venues, she finished tied for ninth in Lake Geneva, Wis. Johnston had posted two top-10 finishes both in 2004 and 2005, and now in 2006 after Lake Geneva, she already had two top-10s with 11 remaining tournaments.

But then along came Sunday, June 18th. Johnston was playing that day in the final round of the Tour's event in Decatur, Ill., and would fly to Los Angeles the next morning to begin two weeks of filming for The Big Break. She was excited and nervous about the show and told her peers on Tour that she'd see them after two weeks. Truet had missed the cut on Saturday and was driving to Lima, Ohio on Sunday afternoon for a special Monday pro-am. It was a rainy, stormy afternoon. Truet never made it to Ohio.

The next morning, as the Indiana Highway Patrol contacted the Duramed FUTURES Tour, the Tour was calling Johnston for Truet's family contact information. Johnston smiled as she had listened to a good-luck message from Truet on her cell phone Sunday afternoon, wishing her well for the Big Break filming. And now, after a short morning flight from Nashville, Tenn., to Atlanta, Johnston was trying to figure out why she had 17 missed calls during her 45-minute flight.

"I knew something had happened, but I thought it was something about the Big Break," said Johnston, who was hustling to make her connections for her flight to Los Angeles. "I was running up an escalator to get to a plane when I was told about Gaelle's accident. And then I was on a plane for five and half hours by myself with this horrible news."

Johnston sat in her seat on the plane crying beside "a lady who was a stone." A man in an adjacent row got up and handed her some tissues. Johnston finally took some Dramamine to fall asleep. It was the longest flight of her life.

"Even now, I'm still in shock," said Johnston last week in West Virginia. "I've never had anyone that close to me die."

In what should have been one of the biggest highs of her young golf career, Johnston landed in L.A., and was greeted by one of the show's producers. The producer had conducted the audition interview with Truet, who also had tried out for the show. Now he and the golf pro embraced and cried together at the airport curb. And then, after some phone calls home, Johnston went to work.

"Gaelle's message on my cell phone said, 'I hope you take advantage of this opportunity and have a really great time,' so I didn't even think about not going through with the Big Break," said Johnston. "I wish I could have been there in Lima for the memorial service and I wish I could have been there with [fellow Tour members] Julie [Tvede] and Dana [Lacey], who had a really hard time with it.

"But for me, it was the best thing because you have zero time to think when you're doing the Big Break," added Johnston. "You're surrounded by cameras. There are 17 other cast members and the entire film crew. You wake up at 5:30 a.m., and you pass out around 10:30 p.m. I didn't have a lot of time to think about it."

Until now.

When Johnston returned to the Tour for the Connecticut event several weeks ago, all the reminders of her friend were there. The French flag from Truet's native New Caledonia flapped in the breeze beside the practice green. And with each following tour stop were reminders of the time she had spent sharing private housing, playing practice rounds, visiting landmarks and traveling the highways with her friend. Last week in West Virginia, Johnston walked into the room she once shared with Truet in private housing. Another player was asleep in the twin bed across the room -- the bed that Truet had picked for the last two years. Johnston found herself sobbing in the dark as she stared at the shadow now lying in that bed.

"We did the same things week after week with the same people and now all of our routines have changed," said Julie Tvede of Copenhagen, Denmark. "Dana [Lacey] and I were here after the accident happened and we got a sense of closure. When an old person dies, you're sad for what was. When a young person dies, you're sad for what will never be. It's a different kind of sadness -- one of such loss, and I think Sarah is still trying to work through it."

"Sarah hides a lot of emotions behind her humor, but that helps her deal with a lot of stuff," added Rachel Bailey of Faulconbridge, Australia. "That's how she deals with tragedy and sometimes nerves on the golf course."

Bailey, along with Kristy McPherson and four other Duramed FUTURES Tour members, was also in the cast of Big Break VI. When they heard the news of Truet's death prior to flying to Los Angeles, the Tour members immediately sought out Johnston the minute they all landed.

"Our hotel rooms were adjoined and we kept our doors open," said McPherson. "Sarah's been through a lot and I really admire her. To still be out here and playing good golf is tough, but she's handled it extremely well."

Of course, her emotional roller coaster is unpredictable. At the Tour's recent event in New Hampshire, Johnston was requested by the same pro-am group who had played with Truet the year before. The team won with Truet last year. And remarkably, they won with Johnston this year.

"There was that common bond, but it was a silent bond," said Johnston.

The emotions were still raw that week and carried over into Johnston's tournament play. She shot the two highest scores she has posted all year -- 78-83 -- and missed the cut.

"Those scores were a culmination of a very tough year," said her dad, teacher and caddie, Ralph Johnston, who played on the PGA Tour in the 1970s. "It was almost like the world fell in on her. Gaelle's death was a life-changing thing for Sarah Lynn and she hasn't gotten a lot of sleep since it happened."

"Sometimes she's an emotional wreck," added Sargent, her boyfriend. "She gets her closure on a daily basis, but you never know when the bad times are coming."

But some good times also came shining through last week in Morgantown. After her scoring collapse in New Hampshire, Johnston considered withdrawing from last week's tournament, but her pal, Tvede, encouraged her to come play the popular tournament and to focus on having some fun in the 15th annual event. Johnston took a deep breath, marched with her dad out onto the hilly course and proceeded to post her career-best tournament finish on the Tour -- a tie for third at six-under-par 210. That showing included a final-round 68 with an eagle on the last hole. When the round was over, Johnston, looking relieved and satisfied, high-fived her Danish friend in the parking lot as she walked to the scoring table.

"I really was going to take this week off because I've been so mentally frustrated," said Johnston. "I don't like to blame the way I play on other things. I think when you go to the golf course, you have to turn off things in your life and just play. I haven't been able to do that lately."

But everybody knows that's easier said, than done. And every player on Tour knows the importance of friendship and support in a job that offers a weekly paycheck only to those players who can keep it together for 54 holes.

Johnston both smiles and cries when she remembers the many conversations she had with Truet over the years. During a break in filming one day at Trump National -- a scenic golf course that overlooks the Pacific Ocean -- she stood, staring out at the water thinking, "Right across this ocean are Gaelle's parents."

And when she came back from the filming and jumped into her car, a song on the radio blasted the words, "You gotta live life to the fullest." It hit home. Truet's death was still real and very raw, but Johnston found herself hearing the words of a familiar tune in a different way.

"Gaelle came halfway around the world to follow a dream, to play college and professional golf, and she did a lot more at age 27 than most people can do in 100 years," said Johnston. "This is also what I want to do. Right now, I'm dealing with losing Gaelle and traveling differently. It's very difficult and you can see it in my scores at times."

And then Johnston paused and a smile came across her face. She recalled how they once ran out of gas at midnight on a lonely two-lane road in South Carolina and had to knock on the door of a stranger's house for a ride to the gas station. That house visit happened after Truet accidentally stood in an ant hill in the dark. She was smacking the biting insects on her legs as the two golfers carefully navigated through a yard of barking dogs, Truet fussing at Johnston for not stopping at the gas station 30 miles back. A day later, insect bites still red and itching, they laughed about the adventure in the thirsty old Bonneville.

"Gaelle always used to say, 'Sarah, you're a great golfer, but stop over-analyzing everything and just have fun,'" Johnston added. "Having a sense of humor is what got both of us through the hard times."

And for Johnston, it still is.

2. Prange Makes LPGA Debut This Week

Her emotions are mixed. Duramed FUTURES Tour member Ashley Prange will make her LPGA Tour debut this week at the LPGA Safeway Classic in Portland, Ore. It's an exemption she earned by winning The Golf Channel's "Big Break V: Hawaii" television show back in May. Being entered into a tournament field at an LPGA Tour event is something that she has always dreamed would happen.

There's just one problem, however. Prange currently is ranked 4th on the Duramed FUTURES Tour's Money List and after this week's tournament in Queenstown, Md., there will only be two tournaments remaining in the Tour's 2006 season. The top five players at the end of the competitive calendar will earn automatic exemptions onto the 2007 LPGA Tour.

"I'm a little nervous about the consequences of me skipping a week out here on the Duramed FUTURES Tour," said Prange, 24, of Noblesville, Ind. "It's a CATCH-22 kind of thing with me leaving for a week this late in the year because it could cost me the whole season. But I'm a gambling woman and hopefully it won't kick me in the butt."

The LPGA Safeway Classic, set for Aug. 18-20 -- the same weekend as the Hunters Oak FUTURES Golf Classic -- will be held at Columbia Edgewater Country Club in Portland and will be televised by The Golf Channel, beginning Friday at 10 p.m. (Eastern).

"I'm just going to use it as a week to go out there and learn what I need to do to be ready for next year," said the former All-American at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "I'm not going out there thinking I'm some hotshot who won a reality show. It's a privilege and an honor to play a tournament on the LPGA Tour."

I'll go out there with the same fight I always have, but it will be all about how I handle it."

The Golf Channel will update viewers on Prange's week at the Safeway Classic, beginning Thursday during the cable network's Live From the PGA Championship news program, which will air immediately following network cover of the PGA Championships (8 p.m. ET Friday, 7 p.m. ET Saturday and Sunday). Coverage of the Safeway Classic will follow Live From the PGA Championship Friday through Sunday. The final installment of the four-part "Game On: Ashley's Big Break" will air this Tuesday on The Golf Channel at 9:30 p.m. (Eastern). The shows have featured behind-the-scenes footage taken over three months of filming, showing Prange's preparation for her LPGA Tour debut.

"I want to enjoy my week out there [on the LPGA Tour]," added Prange. "I'll have two weeks left on our Tour when I get back and I've been playing well all season, so I hope I'll be even more hungry and have even more motivation to play well as we wrap up our year."

3. Tour Chat

Six members of the Duramed FUTURES Tour made the cut at last weeks' CN Canadian Women's Open in London, Ontario. Top finishers in the Canadian event were: KIM BROZER of Red Deer, Alberta, tie for 37th at 291 (+3); TERESA LU of Taipei, Taiwan, tie for 50th at 293 (+5); SALIMAH MUSSANI of Burlington, Ontario and MEREDITH WARD of Crystal Lake, Ill., tied for 58th at 296 (+8); JESSICA SHEPLEY of Oakville, Ontario, tie for 76th at 302 (+14) and BETH ALLEN of San Diego, 83rd at 310 (+22)... Duramed FUTURES Tour alumna CRISTIE KERR of Miami won last week's CN Canadian Women's Open by one shot. Kerr carded a four-day total of 276 (-12) to pocket the $255,000 winner's check and earn her second season win on the LPGA Tour. With season earnings of more than $1.1 million, Kerr moves to fifth on the LPGA's season money list...

Rookie NATHADA HUACHAI of Bangkok, Thailand was thrilled to meet fellow rookie TIFFANY TAVEE's father Tavorn "Tony" Taveepholjalern of Gilbert, Ariz., last week. That's because the elder Tavee owns several Thai restaurants in the Phoenix area and he was doing the family cooking last week in Morgantown. "We travel with a little rice cooker and a hot plate and a couple of pots and pans," said Tiffany, whose father also caddies for her each week during Duramed FUTURES Tour events. Tavee recently sold one of his five restaurants, "The Pink Pepper," which is a popular spot during the LPGA Tour event in Phoenix each year. His newest restaurant is called "Asian Fusion" in downtown Phoenix...

It pays to have friends in high places. LPGA Tour veteran and Duramed FUTURES Tour alum LAURA DAVIES of Great Britain "pulled some strings" to help SAMANTHA HEAD of Bedford, England get exemptions to play in several Ladies European Tour events this season. Playing her first season on the Duramed FUTURES Tour, Head played in three Ladies European Tour events this year, including the Deutsche Bank Ladies Swiss Open, where she finished 16th, and the Vediorbis Open de France (where she was forced to withdraw due to injury), and the OTP Bank Ladies Central Europeans Open in Hungary, where she finished 26th. "Laura has always been so kind and helpful," said Head, twin sister of LPGA and LET member Johanna Head, and winner of the 1999 Ladies' Italian Open and the 2001 South African Masters on the LET Tour...

Second-year player LEIGH ANNE HARDIN of Martinsville, Ind., was an AAU All-American in basketball before she gave up hoops to focus full time on golf and her scholarship at Duke University. But even when she was at Duke fighting for her spot on the team alongside such fellow players as KRISTINA (ENGSTROM) TUCKER of Stockholm, LIZ JANANGELO of West Hartford, Conn., and former Duramed FUTURES Tour alums CANDIE HANNEMANN of Brazil and VIRADA NIRAPATHPONGPORN of Thailand, Hardin would sometimes take her basketball and head to the gym. "I was always a really good shooter and I think that relates to putting," said Hardin, who majored in public policy at Duke. "I'd go to the gym and shoot around by myself. It made me think about putting the basketball into the net and the golf ball into the hole. It's all related because you just think about the ball going in." As a hoops fan, Hardin also was in the right place at Duke, where students regularly camp out for tickets to Cameron Indoor Stadium. Hardin admits that as a freshman, she once camped out in a tent on campus for two weeks for tickets to a sold-out game. No word on that exercise as a drill for tenacity...

4. Quote of the Week

"You miss some and you make some, you win some and you lose some."

-- Duramed FUTURES Tour member Charlotte Mayorkas, who finished second by one stroke last week in West Virginia

5. The Road To The LPGA

Once again, the top four players on the current Duramed FUTURES Tour Money List remained unchanged after last week's tournament in Morgantown, W.Va. Top-ranked Song-Hee Kim of Seoul, Korea remained atop the list with earnings of $62,321 after 15 events. She is followed by: No. 2 Charlotte Mayorkas of Las Vegas at $55,274 after 13 events; No. 3 In-Bee Park of Las Vegas at $39,170 after 14 events; and No. 4 Ashley Prange of Noblesville, Ind., at $34,059 after 16 events.

While five players in the top 12 slipped one spot in the rankings, last week's champion of the Betty Puskar FUTURES Golf Classic, Kristy McPherson of Conway, S.C., charged up the list from 11th to fifth, displacing Allison Fouch of Grand Rapids, Mich., from No. 5 to No. 7, and shuffling Mollie Fankhauser of Columbus, Ohio from No. 7 to No. 8; Hye Jung Choi of Seoul from No. 8 to No. 9; Angela Park of Torrance, Calif., from No. 9 to 10th; and Sarah Huarte of Shingle Springs, Calif., from 10th to 11th.

"That's a big jump, but I need to play solid because the money list is close right now," said McPherson. "It's clutch time."

Added second-ranked Mayorkas, who finished as runner-up last week: "There are three tournaments left and I'm not just going to sit back and cruise."

Making the biggest moves within the top 50 were: Sarah Lynn Johnston of St. Charles, Ill., improving from 36th to 26th; Karen Dennison of Madison, Ind., from 35th to 27th; rookie Yeon Joo Lee of Seoul, Korea, from 49th to 39th; and rookie Sophia Sheridan of Guadalajara, Mexico, taking the biggest jump from No. 62 to No. 40.

"My goal is to finish in the top five every week," said Sheridan, who tied for third in her best season finish last week in West Virginia.

Players making significant moves within positions 50-100 were: Bridget Dwyer of Kailua, Hawaii, from 63rd to 59th; Kelly Cavanaugh of Palos Verdes, Calif., from No. 82 to No. 63; May Wood of Signal Mountain, Tenn., from No. 94 to 80th; and Celeste Troche of Asuncion, Paraguay, from No. 102 to 95th.

6. Kristy McPherson Wins Second Season Title In Morgantown

Call it prophetic. Or maybe just optimistic.

But Kristy McPherson stood behind the scoreboard on Friday and uttered what became reality on Sunday. "If I have a chance to get back into the top five, it will be at this week's event because this is one of my favorite courses on the schedule," she said. "I'm ready to go."

She was ready and she did return to the Tour's top five on the money list. McPherson carded a final-round 67 today to win the $75,000 Betty Puskar FUTURES Golf Classic at The Pines Country Club. The fourth-year pro carded rounds of 68-72-67 for a 207 (-9), to edge Charlotte Mayorkas for her second season win. Mayorkas posted a final round of 69 to finish second at 208 (-8) at the 15th annual tournament in Morgantown.

"I gave myself a lot of opportunities and stayed away from bogeys today," said McPherson, 25, of Conway, S.C., who won her first Duramed FUTURES Tour title back in April in McAllen, Texas. "I woke up this morning knowing that I was capable of posting a good round here on a course I really like and on a course that's in really good shape."

McPherson's goal to win in Morgantown became more attainable by scoring birdies on three of her last four holes and on four of her last six holes in today's final round. Her birdie from 30 feet on the 13th hole put her within one shot of Mayorkas, who grabbed the final-round lead on the third hole. When Mayorkas bogeyed the 14th and McPherson birdied the 15th, it was the South Carolinian who now held a one-shot lead.

But McPherson knew better than to start celebrating with the former UCLA All-American still on the course two groups behind her. True to expectation, Mayorkas -- a two-time season winner herself -- birdied the 16th to stay within a shot of McPherson, who had also added a birdie on the 16th. McPherson's second shot at the par-five 18th hole landed in the front bunker, but she hit it out cleanly to four feet and converted the birdie on the last. All McPherson could do now was to wait.

"Charlotte is a great player and you can never count her out," said McPherson, a former University of South Carolina All-American. "You just have to post birdies and see what happens."

Both McPherson and Mayorkas got through the 209-yard, par-three 17th unscathed, with Mayorkas saving par from six feet. All that was left was the short par-five closing hole. If Mayorkas scored an eagle there, they would have to play off for the title.

"Charlotte can do anything and you can't count her out," said McPherson of the Tour's second-ranked player. "That hole is like a par four for her. If she were to hole out her chip shot, it's time to go play some more."

But the 6-iron, second shot by Mayorkas went right. The best she could do was knock her approach to within 15 feet and hope for a miracle. But the miracle didn't fall into the cup for the San Diego native.

"I didn't even give myself a chance to eagle that last hole to force the playoff," said Mayorkas of Las Vegas. "More than being disappointed, I'm upset with myself because I made some stupid mistakes out there with two bogeys today. Kristy had a great day, but I didn't finish it out there."

Top-ranked Song-Hee Kim of Seoul, Korea made a late charge, getting within a shot of Mayorkas. But the four-time season winner bogeyed the 15th and 16th holes and never recovered, falling into a tie for fifth at 212 (-4). Rookie Ha-Na Chae of Seoul, also made a run at the lead in today's final round, scorching 6,336-yard, par-72 Pines course with a six-under-par score of 66. But Chae she also joined the six-way tie for fifth at 212.

With an eagle on the 18th hole, third-year player Sarah Lynn Johnston of St. Charles, Ill., carded a final-round 68 to tie for third at 210 (-6). The former Furman University All-American choked down a 7-wood from 187 yards, and then converted a 35-foot putt for eagle. It was her career-low finish that included a career-low day of 25 putts.

"I definitely do not feel like I played well enough to finish like I did," said Johnston. "I was going to take this week off because I've been so mentally frustrated."

Rookie Sophia Sheridan of Guadalajara, Mexico settled into a tie for third at 210 alongside Johnston with her final round of 69. Sheridan birdied two of her last four holes for her late charge. The former collegian at the University of California-Berkeley said she was buoyed by playing in the same pairing as McPherson.

"Kristy never missed a shot and she putted really well," said Sheridan. "It made me play better because of that. You have to go low on Sundays. Sundays are about all or nothing."

That approach certainly worked for McPherson today, as it has since she was selected as a contestant in The Golf Channel's "Big Break VI: Trump National" show. Filming for the show took place in Los Angeles during June and took McPherson off the tour during that time. While she was gone, she dropped five positions on the money list and out of the top five -- risking being awarded a 2007 LPGA Tour card that belongs to the top five players on the money list at season's end. Some of her peers questioned why a strong player like McPherson would potentially trade a top-five spot on the money list for a spot in the TV show.

"She had a pretty big hole to dig herself out of after she took the two weeks off," said fellow Tour member and good friend, Janell Howland of Boise, Idaho. "But everything happens the way it's supposed to happen. And with three tournaments left, it's still a crapshoot. Fortunately, Kristy's pretty good at craps."

Moving forward, McPherson hopes things will fall into place much as her game has in recent weeks. The Big Break VI show premieres on September 26th. The top five players who automatically earn 2007 LPGA Tour cards will "graduate" from the Duramed FUTURES Tour on Sept. 10th. McPherson's jump today from 11th to fifth on the Tour's current money list is a step closer to where she hopes to be.

But then again, it's right where she said she wanted to be.
